Call For Papers

The OWASP Italy and the University of Udine Italy would like to announce a call for papers for OWASP Day 2019 Italy to be in held in Udine, Italy on December 14th, 2019. This will be a free, one day, informal conference, aimed at increasing awareness and knowledge of application security. The conference is intended to appeal to application security professionals, professional software developers, software quality engineers and computer science students. The conference goal is to stimulate interest in application and secure software engineering practices and new initiatives within organizations. Special topics of interest for this conference are cloud security and security emerging technologies like blockchain and cryptocurrencies OWASP Italy solicits contributions on the above topics of interest.   We encourage local students, security professionals and academics to present papers as an opportunity to share knowledge and lesson learned on relevant application and software security topics with previous experience in presenting at security conferences.
